Appendix A.
Soap Creek Valley Oral History Series Monographs, 1990-1999

This appendix lists the 17 oral history monographs that were created as a basis for this thesis. The appendix is in the form of two tables: the first simply lists the title names and monograph numbers of the 17 Soap Creek Valley Oral History Series; the second provides a summary of total and type of index pages for each monograph.

Table A.1 is taken from Monograph #14. Table A.2 lists the number of concordance file index pages (Zybach & Islam 1999), the number of Table of Content pages—usually arranged and titled thematically and/or chronologically—, and the number of indexed maps, for each monograph. Soap Creek valley index maps were produced from the same base maps used for this thesis (see Maps 2 and 15), and located specific interview points. Not all of the oral histories involved on-site interviews, and only Vanderburg's (1995) required the use of two maps. The total number of index pages, based upon common themes, maps, and words, indicates the relative efficiency in which non-linear access to common data can be obtained for the entire series of monographs. Additional value is that resulting data can be readily scaled in time and place, depending on its purpose or focus.

Appendix B. Informant Consent Forms and Filings, 1975-1999

Appendix B. provides copies of the informed consent documents that were developed and used for the oral histories in this research. Signed, original agreements span from 1975 to 1999, and reflect specific research purposes and affiliations for which they were designed. The following copies are a representative selection of original signed agreements that have been altered to protect the confidentiality of participants.

Figure B.1 is a copy of the earliest agreement used to provide published content for the Soap Creek Valley Oral History Series, signed in 1975. Figures B.2 (1979) and B.3 (1980) document the College of Forestry oral history program (Jackson 1980), in cooperation with OSU Horner Museum (Berg 1983; Davies 1997; see Chapters I and II). Fig. B.4 reflects the initiation of the Soap Creek Valley Oral History Series' interviews by OSU Research Forests, in late 1989 and early 1990. Fig. B.5 (eight parts reproduced in 4 pages) is a copy of new "human subject" filings required by OSU, in 1995. This requirement was developed subsequent to the beginning of the Soap Creek Valley History Project, which describes the apparent incongruity of sequence; i.e., today this form would have to be filed in advance of recording agreements, not 5-20 years after their filings. Fig. B.6 is an updated OSU Research Forests' agreement, reflecting recent technological changes in oral history documentation processes, and Fig. B.7 is a current agreement, reflecting potential digital products and possible income from those products.

Oral History Program
OSU Research Forests

1. The project under consideration is the Oral History Program at the OSU Research Forests. This program uses oral interviews to document the lives of people important to the College of Forestry and to document past lifeways. The history of the lands now owned by the OSU Research Forests are such that the people who grew up on them can recall and document past land use practices. The collection of oral histories is a major part of the cultural resource management of the OSU Research Forests and aids in compliance with the National Historic Preservation Act, ORS 390.235 to 390.240, and ORS 358.905 to 358.955.
2. Oral histories are tape recorded interviews, usually focusing on a specific geographic area or time period. Interviews are conducted in a variety of settings, including OSU property, or at the subject's residence. Follow up interviews, to clarify issues and to visit places mentioned in interviews, may be conducted. Photo albums are reviewed and sometimes borrowed so that copies of the personal photos which enhance the oral history can be included. The photographs provide a way to identify the changing cultural landscape. These tapes will be transcribed and reviewed by the subject; in some cases they may be published. A preface will be placed on the tape at the beginning of the interview which will identify the interviewer(s) and subject(s), where the interview is conducted, the date of the interview, and a brief statement about the subject which indicates why they are being interviewed. The interviewer will keep written notes during the interview. These notes are to identify collateral materials such as photographs, diaries or other mementos that might be of interest and to identify topics that might be of interest for a later interview. A photograph will be taken of the subject during the interview.

4. Subjects selected for interview are individuals with ties to OSU Research Forest lands. These include former Forest managers, former Camp Adair officials, and long term local residents.
5. Attached is a copy of the informed consent and examples of types of restrictions that may be applied to the interview.
6. Informed consent will be obtained at the time of the first interview before any taped interview is conducted. The interviewer will identify themselves as a representative of the OSU Research Forests, provide them with their name and an address and phone number, the name and address of the Cultural Resource Manager and the Research Forest Director and how these people can be contacted in the future. The interviewer and the subject will review the consent form. The interviewer shall inform the subject of examples of restrictions that might be attached to the consent form and inform them that these restrictions will also be added at a later date if the subject so desires. If additional interviews are conducted the consent form will be updated to identify those dates.
7. Anonymity and confidentiality will be discussed when consent is obtained. If the subject desires anonymity the subjects wishes will be respected and restrictions to the consent form will reflect this. For example, a transcription may be undertaken with the subject anonymous and the tape sealed, or the tape sealed and no transcription or the tape simply returned to the subject with no further work. The consent form would be amended to reflect any of these restrictions, especially if it occurs after the initial interview.
8. The following background information will be collected at each initial interview:

OSU HISTORY PERSONAL DATA RECORD
Name _____	Date of Birth _____	Place of Birth _____
Year you or your parents came to Oregon _____	Year you came to the area you now live in _____	Place first lived _____
Place emigrated from _____	Mode of travel _____	Route of travel _____
FAMILY: Spouse _____	Brothers and sisters (married names) _____	Date and place married _____

3. The OSU Research Forests benefits from the project by understanding past land-use on the forest. The project also assists in the identification of historic sites in terms of their function, chronological placement, and the people associated with the site. Significantly, the project helps comply with the state and county goals of recognizing Oregon's state heritage.
